RESEARCH AND FIELDWORK

1. January 2018 to present, currently serving as the Lead Qualitative Research for an implementation science research study that aims to build theory and empirical evidence on strategies to improve the use of research evidence within child welfare systems in ways that benefit youth. Responsibilities include supervision of qualitative research processes, design of data collection and analysis protocols, collection and interpretation of data, and preparation of written reports and manuscripts.
2. April 2017 to present, currently serving as the Lead Qualitative Researcher for a multi-state comparative effectiveness trial of a home visitation program to reduce child maltreatment, improve client outcomes, and examine client burden. Responsibilities include supervision of qualitative research processes, design of data collection and analysis protocols, collection and interpretation of data, and preparation of written reports and manuscripts.
3. January 2017 to present, currently serving as a Technical Assistance (TA) Specialist for Native American intervention initiatives under the California Reducing Disparities Project. This role entails implementation of participatory, culture-centered TA to facilitate utilization-focused evaluation and community-defined evidence practice to reduce mental health disparities for rural and urban Native American priority populations in California. Responsibilities include provision of input into evaluation designs and data collection and analysis protocols, training, and contributing to written reports.
4. January 2017 to present, currently serving as the Principal Investigator of a district-wide implementation science study to implement, evaluate, and sustain restorative practices in middle schools in a metropolitan area of New Mexico. Responsibilities include supervision of research staff and subcontractors, participatory planning processes, maintenance of collaborative relationships with school district personnel, design of data collection and analysis protocols, collection and interpretation of data, and preparation of written reports and manuscripts.
5. May 2016 to September 2017, served as the Principal Investigator of small pilot project funded by the Pacific Institute of Research and Evaluation to study the feasibility and acceptability of strategies to engage Emergency Department (ED) physicians and staff in intervention research to improve care for transgender patients. Responsibilities include collaboration with EDs and patient advocates in New Mexico, data collection, analysis, and preparation of a written report, manuscript, and grant application.
6. March 2016 to present, currently serving as the Co-Principal Investigator of a mixed-method implementation study to engage school nurses and other stakeholders in championing use of evidence-based strategies to improve school climate and culture for students who are sexual or gender minority and at risk for suicide and other adverse psychosocial outcomes. Responsibilities include supervision of research staff and subcontractors, participatory planning processes, maintenance of collaborative relationships with school nurses, design of data collection and analysis protocols, collection and interpretation of data, and preparation of written reports and manuscripts.
7. July 2015 to present, currently serving as the Principal Investigator of a mixed-method intervention study that aims to examine and improve insurance coverage and health care access and utilization for Native American elders under state and national health reform. Responsibilities include supervision of research staff and subcontractors, participatory planning processes, design of data collection and analysis protocols, collection and interpretation of data, intervention development and evaluation, and preparation of written reports and manuscripts.
8. January 2013 to July 2017, served as Co-Investigator of a series of small grants from the Patient-Centered Outcomes Research Institute to collect community input and develop local capacity for studies of health care delivery involving lesbian, gay, bisexual, and transgender populations in New Mexico. Responsibilities include advisement on participatory methodologies, data collection and analysis, statewide conference planning and implementation, and grant preparation.

9. February 2013 to July 2014, served as Principal Investigator of small pilot project funded by the Pacific Institute of Research and Evaluation to study the feasibility and acceptability of telehealth technology to facilitate reentry planning services for women leaving prison in New Mexico. Responsibilities include collaboration with state government agencies, correctional facilities, and community-based mental health organizations, data collection, analysis, and write up of findings.
10. January 2013 to January 2014, served as a Qualitative Researcher for the Bundled Payments for Care Improvement Model 1 Initiative of the Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services (CMS). Through this new initiative, made possible by the Affordable Care Act, CMS is testing how bundling payments for episodes of care can result in more coordinated care for beneficiaries and lower costs for Medicare. Responsibilities include training and technical assistance, interview and focus group instrument design, data collection, and analysis, and preparation of case studies and written reports.
11. November 2012 to August 2013, served as the Lead Evaluator of a university-based pipeline program for Native American people interested in careers in the health professions. Responsibilities included instrument design, analysis, and preparation of written reports.
12. July 2012 to present, currently serving as a Co-Investigator of a mixed-methods study that aims to study the child welfare intervention in Oklahoma and California. Responsibilities include supervision of qualitative research processes, design of data collection and analysis protocols, collection and interpretation of data, and preparation of written reports and manuscripts.
13. November 2011 to December 2012, served as Technical Consultant and Trainer in the conduct of community-based participatory research among law enforcement personnel engaged in methamphetamine prevention and intervention in Native American communities. Responsibilities included: content development; Webinars; in-person training, and technical assistance to tribes.
14. September 2011 to March 2013, served as the Evaluator of a W.W. Kellogg Foundation-funded community collaboration designed to improve health and social services in the predominantly Latino South Valley of Albuquerque, NM. Responsibilities included: development of program implementation and evaluation plans, design of data collection and analysis protocols, collection and interpretation of data, and preparation of written reports.
15. July 2011 to April 2017, served as a Co-Investigator of a mixed-methods intervention study that aims to study the roll-out, adoption, and sustainment of an evidence-based child welfare intervention in San Diego County, CA. Responsibilities include supervision of qualitative research processes, design of data collection and analysis protocols, collection and interpretation of data, and preparation of written reports and manuscripts.
16. July 2011 to June 2015, served as the Principal Investigator of a mixed-methods intervention study that aims to create and test a peer advocate program for rural lesbian, gay, bisexual, and transgender persons with mental illness. Responsibilities include supervision of research staff, participatory planning processes, design of data collection and analysis protocols, collection and interpretation of data, and preparation of written reports and manuscripts.
17. August 2010 to March 2014, served as the Principal Investigator of technical assistance project to provide consultation services to Native American communities to plan, implement, and evaluate impaired driving programs. Responsibilities include technical assistance, consultation, refinement of work plans, process evaluation, and preparation of written reports and articles.
18. January 2009 to July 2011, served as the Principal Investigator of a multi-method study that utilized formative research to adapt the Critical Time Intervention for women returning to rural settings upon discharge from prison. Responsibilities include supervision of research staff, design of data collection and analysis protocols, collection and interpretation of data, participatory planning process, and preparation of written reports and manuscripts.
19. February 2008 to August 2008, served as the Principal Investigator of a local evaluation of the Total Community Approach (TAC) to substance abuse prevention. Evaluation centered on prevention activities undertaken by community members from the Navajo Nation. Responsibilities included engagement in state evaluation advisory board, collection of data for the statewide evaluation of TAC, participatory development and implementation of evaluation design that address the specific goals and needs of the Navajo collaborators, and preparation of written reports.

20. September 2007 to 2010, served as the Principal Investigator of a qualitative investigation of public health programs to reduce impaired driving in Native American communities. The purpose of this assessment was to identify and disseminate effective strategies for program development and implementation purposes. Responsibilities included supervision of research staff, design of data collection and analysis protocols, collection and interpretation of data, preparation of written reports, and creation of a framework for a culturally relevant comprehensive program that can be adapted by Native American communities to address impaired driving problems.
21. August 2007 to February 2008, served as the Principal Investigator of a multi-method evaluation of a “clinical home” intervention for adolescents released from detention settings and in need of mental health services. Responsibilities include supervision of research staff, design of data collection and analysis protocols, collection and interpretation of data, and preparation of written reports.
22. November 2005 to March 2011, served as the Principal Investigator of a multi-method ethnographic assessment of public behavioral health reform in New Mexico. The project includes a focus on how the reform impacts the delivery of services to persons with mental illness. Responsibilities include development of community advisory board, supervision of research staff, design of data collection and analysis protocols, collection and interpretation of data, and preparation of written reports.
23. April 2005 to March 2008, served as the Principal Investigator of an ethnographic project that examines substance abuse and help-seeking processes among Hispanic and non-Hispanic adolescent drug users and their social supports in southwestern New Mexico. Responsibilities included development of community advisory board and research workgroup, supervision of fieldworkers, design of data collection and analysis protocols, collection and interpretation of data, and preparation of written reports.
24. July 2004 to November 2005, served as the Lead Anthropologist of the multi-method project, “Long Term Recovery among Convicted Drunk Drivers,” which was funded by the National Institute on Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism. Responsibilities included design of qualitative data collection and analysis protocols, interpretation of data, and preparation of written reports.
25. January 2004 to June 2004, served on the research team spearheading a qualitative assessment of children and adolescent health providers’ inclination to incorporate a new vaccine for human papillomavirus (HPV) into clinical practices. Responsibilities included data collection instrument design.
26. July 2003 to October 2005, served as the Principal Investigator of an ethnographic project that focused on how multiple-minority status lesbian, gay, bisexual, and transgendered populations access mental health services in rural and urban settings of New Mexico. Responsibilities included development of community advisory board, supervision of fieldworkers, design of data collection and analysis protocols, collection and interpretation of data, and preparation of written reports.
27. July 2003 to June 2004, served as the Lead Evaluator of a Robert Wood Johnson Foundation-funded project that aimed to engage promotoras and primary care providers in the identification and treatment of depression. Responsibilities included supervision of evaluation team, design of structured observation and semi-structured interview protocols, and collection and analysis of evaluation data.
28. September 2003 to June 2004, served as the Co-Investigator of Southwest Alcohol Research Group, a National Institute on Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism-funded collaboration involving the University of New Mexico’s Center of Alcoholism, Substance Abuse and Addictions and the Institute of Public Health. This collaboration aimed to enhance the university’s capacity to conduct alcohol intervention research in Native American and Hispanic/Latino communities. Responsibilities included coordination of community outreach and dissemination component.
29. July 2002 to June 2004, served as the Principal Investigator of an ethnographic project that examined the effects of Medicaid managed care on mental health services in two demographically distinct and culturally distinct rural communities of New Mexico. Responsibilities included supervision of fieldworkers, design of data collection and analysis protocols, collection and interpretation of data, and preparation of written reports.

30. July 2002 to October 2003, served as the Co-Investigator for a focus group study of cultural variation in views about health data privacy and community participatory research. Duties included developing focus group instruments, conducting focus groups, and analyzing data.
31. March 2002 to June 2003, served as the Principal Investigator of an ethnographic project that examined the treatment seeking behaviors of illicit drug users in Northern New Mexico. Responsibilities included supervision of fieldworkers, design of data collection and analysis protocols, collection and interpretation of data, and preparation of written reports.
32. January 2002 to June 2003, served as the Evaluation Manager for the project "Family-Centered Diabetes Project: Sharing Wisdom." The project focused on the prevention of diabetes among urban Native American women and their families. Duties included supervision of research assistants, development and pilot-test of evaluation instruments, and data analysis.
33. November 2001 to June 2004, served as the Co-Investigator of an intervention effectiveness evaluation of a culturally appropriate model program that was intended to reduce agricultural-related injuries on the Navajo Nation. Duties included participatory planning, developing and implementing evaluation instruments, data analysis, and report writing.
34. September 1999 to September 2003, served as the Evaluation Manager for the project "Training Preceptors in Human Research Ethics: Augmentation of a Southwestern Program with a Minority Focus." Duties included developing and implementing evaluation instruments, conducting needs assessments and community outreach activities, data analysis, report writing, and participation in the development of a video that addresses research ethics issues in Native American communities.
35. September 1999 to January 2002, served on the Ethnography Team for the Medicaid Managed Care Project at the University of New Mexico. Responsibilities included coordination of project's mental health research component, participant observation in mental health settings, data analysis, grant writing, article writing, and maintenance of an interdisciplinary annotated managed care bibliography.
36. October 1999 to November 1999, participated in child safety restraint observation study for the New Mexico Department of Health.
37. January 1996 to July 1997, undertook ethnographic research on the delivery of mental health care services on the Navajo Nation. Project methods included participant observation, formal and informal interviewing, structured vignette technique, transcription, and data analysis.
38. August 1995, engaged in pilot anthropological research among mental health providers who serve Native American populations in the Southwest United States.
