EDUCATION

PhD student, Human Evolutionary Anthropology Subfield, Department of Anthropology, University of New Mexico. 2003-present.

MA in Biological Anthropology (2001). California State University, Chico.

Thesis Title: The Daily Grind: Activity Patterns, Sexual Division of Labor, and Central California Prehistory.

BA in Anthropology (1997). Minor in Biology. Southwest Texas State University.

RESEARCH INTERESTS

My main research interests are in bioarchaeology, mortuary analysis, and zooarchaeology. I focus primarily in the Southwestern US with an emphasis on the southern and eastern San Juan Basin, Central and Northern Rio Grande, and the western High Plains and Front Range. My research areas include analysis of identity and social structure through mortuary practices and cranio/dento-metrics, longbone cross sectional geometry and mobility, garden hunting, and Puebloan use of avifauna.

ACADEMIC POSITIONS

8/2005-12/2005 Lecturer. Anth 350-Human Biology. Department of Anthropology, University of New Mexico. Instructor of record for the course.

1/2005-5/2005 Lecturer. Anth 150-Evolution and Human Emergence. Department of Anthropology, University of New Mexico. Instructor of record for the course.

1/2001-5/2001 Lecturer. Anth140- Introduction to Physical Anthropology. Dept. of Anthropology, California State University. Instructor of record for both the lecture and laboratory portions of the class.

8/1998-5/2000 Graduate Teaching Associate. Introduction to Physical Anthropology Laboratory. Department of Anthropology, California State University.

8/1996-6/1997 Teaching Assistant. Comparative Vertebrate Anatomy Laboratory. Department of Biology, Southwest Texas State University.

EMPLOYMENT HISTORY

6/2006-present Senior Archaeologist (2006-2015), Archaeology Projects Administrator (2015–). Office of Contract Archeology, Maxwell Museum of Anthropology, University of New Mexico, Albuquerque, NM.
